

"One of America's Best Colleges"

Special Insert

Dr. James Dobson answers
the question:

"SHOULD
A CHRISTIAN STUDENT ATTEND
COLLEGE?"

The Christian college is one of the few places where the Christian family is still being role modeled and where basic Christian virtues are aggressively being taught. Few persons have worked harder and have earned more credibility than Dr. James Dobson when it comes to speaking to issues relating to the family and the many societal and spiritual challenges that confront it.

In a recent Focus on the Family newsletter, Dr.

Dobson contrasts the values of the Christian college with that of the secular institution and makes a strong appeal in support of the Christian college. We were so impressed with his remarks that we requested and received his permission to reprint the article and to include it with this issue of the NOW.

We encourage you to carefully read his remarks and heed his call to support Christian higher education. Join us in expressing our gratitude to Dr. Dobson for his work on behalf of the family and Christian values by sending him a note of appreciation.

—President Alvin O.

LeTourneau on the Move

Normally I try to focus my commentary within each issue of the NOW on a single topic. But in this issue, I simply want to let you know about several exciting things planned for the months ahead.

Houston Educational Center

About three years ago we began our LEAP (LeTourneau Education for Adult Professionals) program, seeking to meet the educational needs of working adult students by combining our commitment to quality, Christ-centered academic programs with non-traditional, flexible educational systems. The response to the LEAP program has been exceptionally positive. We have about 725 students enrolled in our LEAP program, with class sites in Tyler and Bedford (a suburb of Fort Worth), and a full "Educational Center"—a mini-campus with offices, eight classrooms, a library and other facilities—in Dallas.

For some time now alumni and friends in the Houston area have been encouraging us to expand the program there. After significant market research, planning and prayer, our Board of Trustees has approved our opening an Educational Center there. We are in the final negotiations to obtain a quality facility, and we have begun the process of hiring staff and faculty, and are recruiting students. We anticipate that our first Houston classes will begin in September. This is another example of the LeTourneau "spirit of ingenuity" as we are able to export our Christian values and our commitment to quality education into the broader marketplace. Pray that God will bless this new endeavor by providing the appropriate facility, bringing us well-trained, committed Christian faculty, and drawing students who are eager to get a LeTourneau education.

Travel with LeTourneau

Most of us enjoy the opportunity to see our beautiful country or absorb the experiences of traveling in another part of the world. This coming year, through our Office of Special Programs, coordinated by Georgie Willcox, LeTourneau will once again offer a variety of tour programs that blend the best features of well planned and conducted tours with the special fellowship that occurs among people of common faith and interests. Whether you are an alum, a parent, a friend of the University or a friend of a friend, we invite you to travel with us!

Across the page you'll notice a listing of our 1993-94 tour schedule. I'd like to highlight the two trips to Israel. I think most Christians

A FRIEND PASSES

Earl Martin, director of services at LeTourneau University, died Feb. 16, after a lengthy battle with cancer.

In a moving memorial service held on campus after his death, many students and staff members shared their feelings about Earl.

Senior Candice Brown said, "He, more than anyone,...has shown a love to all kinds of people in all walks of life." Mark Farrell, also a senior, noted that, "He just wanted to see this campus grow," and added that Martin's work here in the lives of students will last because, "his work was for the kingdom of Christ."

"Giving to one another was what Earl was all about," said associate professor of English Leta Fae Arnold.

Funeral services were held at Mobberly Baptist Church, where Martin and his wife, Dimple, were longtime members. The Rev. Laney Johnson and Dr. Alvin Austin officiated.

Born May 27, 1936, in Thomasville, Ala., Martin was raised in Vickburg, Miss. He served in the Army and completed 33 jumps as a member of the 101st Airborne Battalion during the Korean War. After working in the chemical industry, he joined LeTourneau in 1977. During Martin's tenure at LeTourneau he oversaw a major physical reshaping of the campus, including the addition of new dorms, Heath-Hardwick Hall, Longview Hall, the campus mall and Belcher Tower, and the re-design of the campus entrance.

The students, faculty and staff rejoice in Earl's homegoing, and extend their sympathies to his family.

Earl, we'll really miss you.

Chris Cardenas, a senior mechanical engineering major from Montrose, Colo., negotiates a curve at the MiniBaja West Student Design Competition which was held at the University of Texas at El Paso this spring. LeTouneau student teams designed and built three of the off-road vehicles as an engineering project.

The list of naval engineering feats in East Texas is slim at best. But an eight-member LeTouneau University team and their nine-month project may prove successful against 50 other collegiate and professional squads in a 12-day June competition at Fort Lauderdale, Fla. There, during the third International Human-Powered Submarine Races, the students' first crack at undersea travel will be against seasoned foes like M.I.T., the U.S. Naval Academy and Great Britain's University of Southampton.

"The field may be tough, but L.U.'s crew is confident in their abilities and their 13-foot-long by 27-inch-wide vessel aptly named 'The Bends,'" said Jonathan Dye, a senior mechanical engineering major from Baker City, Ore., and student project leader.

Along with its reference to nitrogen narcosis, a painful illness divers can suffer, "The Bends" also describes the craft's unique design, which allows it to slip through the water more easily by changing the shape rather than by using traditional fins, according to Dye.

The sub, which is designed to be flooded with water, holds 250 pounds of scuba and safety gear, as well as two students: a navigator and a driver (propeller operator). The sub must twice navigate a 800-meter oval course and several straight time trials. According to Dye, the craft is capable of 4.2 knots, or 7 mph, at an average depth of 21 feet.

Crew members, in addition to Dye, are navigator Brent Toavs, a senior ME major from Wolf Point, Mont., driver Dan Noack, a senior ME major from Cedar Falls, Iowa, James Beylotte, Houston, Dan Johnson, Jamestown, N.Y., John Langston, Hartford, N.Y., Kevin Orttman, Lamp, MO, and Amy Shane, Friday Harbor, Wa. The crew has been working on the sub since August 1992.

Generous financial and technical support has been provided by a number of local area businesses and individuals, including Harold LeTouneau, president of H. Lorimer Corporation, Skeeter Boats, and Longview Pro Scuba. Dr. Bill Thrasher is faculty advisor to the project. —This report has been adapted, with permission, from an article by Bill Hornaday which originally appeared in the Tyler (Tex.) Courier-Times-Telegraph.

PROJECT RECYCLE

"Project Recycle" has been completely funded, reports V.P. for Advancement Jim Hughey. The project, presented to alumni and friends earlier this spring, raised over $20,000 and provided funds to renovate the old business and adult education division building for much needed student services use.

The project brought under one roof a wide range of student services, including career planning and placement, campus security, counseling, married students' nursery, student publications, and student senate offices. "We are grateful for faithful friends who share in the ministry of LeTouneau University," said Hughey.

SEND YOUR BOOKS
TO COLLEGE

The University's Estes Library needs your books. According to Dennis Read, director of the Learning Resource Center, the library is expanding and needs donations of book collections in the following academic fields:

History—any period or area.

Literature—works of significant authors from all periods, plus works of literary criticism, poetry and short stories.

Political Science—works published in the last 20 years.

Psychology—works of significant authors, plus analysis, criticisms or explanations of those works.

Religion—works by 20th century authors, especially those from the last 20 years; commentaries.

SPECIAL

COLLECTIONS—Dennis is also eager to talk to you if you have developed a special collection of books, even if the field is not listed above.

Please do not send any books without checking with Dennis first. He can be reached at (903) 753-0231.

Building
Character

or the third consecutive year, LeTourneau University has been named to the John

Templeton Foundation's Honor Roll

for Character Building Colleges. The Honor Roll lists colleges and universities which "best promote the development of strong moral character among its students,"

according to a foundation spokesman.

It was one of only 111

colleges and universities in the U.S.

selected for this recognition. An additional 47 schools received

Honorable Mentions. "It's a real honor to be named once again to the Honor Roll," said Dr. Alvin O. Austin, president of LeTourneau University.

"It is especially noteworthy because building character and Christian values is at the heart of all we do,"

continued Austin. "The 111 schools from 32 states highlighted on the Honor Roll this year deserve to be recognized," states John M.

Templeton, the investment advisor and philanthropist who created the John Templeton Foundation.

"It is the hope of the Foundation that all universities and colleges will aspire to join the ranks of Honor Roll schools

by consciously instilling

integrity and value judgement into the educational experience of students on their campuses," said

Templeton.

A team of LeTourneau University students once again has won the Ryder Aviation Texas Aviation Maintenance Competition, held in April in Dallas. This is the seventh year in a row LeTourneau has won the competition. The LeTourneau team was led by Roger Lee, a senior from Grand Prairie, Tex., who also took first place in the individual competition. Other team members were Brent Palmer, a senior from Longview, Tex., and Jeff Hoebel, a junior from Henderson, Tex. The team was coached by David Scroggins, instructor of aviation.

All"

Wow! What a neat weekend! I've just experienced my first reunion after a 40 year absence from the campus and am bubbling over with good feelings about the time I've spent there.

Professor Joseph Gaizer was most cordial to me and made me feel right at home as we attended Friday's chapel together. The service moved me to tears as I remembered similar services of years ago. Lunch at noon on Friday with several tables of students was congenial and meaningful as each of the young people introduced themselves to me and readily answered my questions about their goals and aspirations. They should be commended for their friendliness.

The Friday night talent show was thoroughly enjoyed. It was evident much work went into it. Local alumni introduced themselves to me as they took seats next to mine.

The Saturday breakfast was great! Getting to talk about spiritual concerns with Fay Livers and hearing Dr. Austin speak of wanting the university to count for Jesus were moving experiences. Both presentations on

Bible prophecy were most informative — I only wish I could have heard more. The food and fellowship were superb.

Everyone that I spoke with on campus was friendly to me, from faculty and staff, to the bookstore staff, to maintenance men, to the library staff, to several young married couples (alumni) with whom I shared lunch on Saturday. to a conversation with Roger Carr on Sunday morning... all served to enhance the memorable weekend.

It reminded me of how thankful I should be for the spiritual and technical base I received there and have used these many years.

I thank you for the effort you put forth to make it happen. I shall pray for you and the university each day.

With love,

Graduation was a very moving time for the students, their family and the faculty and staff. I shared with the newest members of our great alumni family God's words in Colossians 2:8: "See to it that no one takes you captive through hollow and deceptive philosophy, which depends on human tradition and the basic principles of this world rather than on Christ."

We are being bombarded by this world's hollow and deceptive philosophy as never before through the media, political leaders and even in some of our churches and schools. Please pray with me that our new graduates will depend on Christ for all things!

Planning a Worry-free Vacation

It's that time of year again! School is out and summer has begun. It's time for that long-awaited vacation, a chance to get away from the stress of everyday life and work. A nice vacation provides an opportunity to recharge your physical, emotional and spiritual batteries.

No matter how ready we think we are for a carefree vacation, most of us cannot jump in the car and head off without first attending to a few details. We must first make plans to be away.

Checklist for a worry-free vacation

Below are some of the details to plan before you leave town on a worry-free vacation. There may be other matters that need you attention, too. Add them to the list and go over it carefully.

- confirm lodging reservations
- check the maintenance on your car
- know your itinerary and leave an emergency phone number with family or friends
- stop mail and newspaper delivery
- ask a neighbor to water flowers or feed pets

What have you forgotten?

What about your will? Is it ready for your vacation? Is there anything that needs to be changed to bring it up to date? Here's a second checklist to go over before you leave:

- review "How To Make A Will That Works"
- call attorney to prepare or revise your will

- meet with attorney to sign will
- complete "Memo To: My Loved Ones" and leave it with family

Now, with one final glance over the lists, you should be ready to enjoy a worry-free vacation.

(Adapted with permission from Westmont College.)

Record-Breaking Season

Jamie Smitherman, freshman pitcher from Kilgore, Texas, takes a solid base hit in a hard-fought game against arch-rival East Texas Baptist. Under the direction of second-year head baseball coach Paul Schwendel the Jackets had their best effort ever, finishing with a 29-19 record. The team earned a berth in the NALA playoffs for the first time in nearly 10 years, and demolished virtually every season record in the book.

Correction:
The basketball player identified as Eddie Berumen on page 8 of our last issue was actually Barry Carothers! Our apologies for the error.
